Students, parents and teachers attended the School Choice Forum event Tuesday to discuss education options in Missouri.

The discussions included everything from traditional public schools to charter schools and alternative learning.

Organizers said it's important for families to be able to choose the school that best meets their child's needs.

"The beauty of school choice is it allows us to really have different types of schools that meet the needs of different types of students," James Shuls, an Assistant Professor at University of Missouri St. Louis, said.

Tuesday's forum was held in conjunction with National School Choice Week.
